

August is National Immunizations Month/Back to school

- Immunizations are important for everyone, especially babies and young children.
- My name is Janet Olszewski and I am the Director of the Michigan Department of Community Health.
- August is National Immunizations Awareness Month. With the school year just around the corner, make sure your children are up to date on their vaccinations.
- Vaccinations protect you and your children from disease and they help reduce the spread of diseases.
- To learn more about what immunizations your child needs, contact your school district. For more information about immunizations, contact your physician or visit our Web site at www.michigan.gov/mdch.
